The recent approval of Ethereum ETFs by the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) has led to greater enthusiasm in the crypto market, triggering a domino effect that could benefit other altcoins such as Ripple (XRP) and Solana (SOL). Next Spot ETF Candidate: XRP Or SOL

There are all kinds of opinion about next spot ETF candidate. Among them, XRP and SOL are regarded by most experts and analysts as the most likely candidate for next spot ETF.

According to Standard Chartered analyst Geoffrey Kendrick, “for other coins (eg. SOL, XRP), markets will look ahead to their eventual ETF status as well, albeit this is likely a 2025 story, not a 2024 one.” “For now, Bitcoin and Ether dominance will rise, with selective “next in line” winners as well.”

While several industry experts have suggested that SOL would be a logical choice for a third ETF, given its similarities to Ethereum.

Brokerage firm Bernstein said in a note on Thursday that given Ethereum’s classification as a commodity, the token could follow a similar path. While Solana is the third biggest cryptocurrency after Bitcoin and Ethereum by market cap. This is excluding stablecoin Tether (USDT) and Binance Coin (BNB).

While according to well-known crypto strategist Nick, an XRP ETF could be on the horizon. He revealed several factors signaling a promising future for Ripple’s native token, including the trend of tokenizing real-world assets (RWA), Ripple’s anticipated initial public offering (IPO), the emergence of a Ripple-backed stablecoin, and regulatory clarity on institutional sales of XRP, etc.

The amount of possible catalysts behind \$XRP is insane.

- Tokenization (RWA narrative)
- Ripple IPO still looming
- Ripple stablecoin
- Full Clarity (Institutional Sales)
- Partnership Announcements
- #XRP ETF
- 7 years of accumulation (break out)
- Major #XRPL amendments
- XRPL adoption growing
- Relisted on ALL exchanges again

Although XRP gets a ton of hate and the frustration is at ATHs already, the pressure is building. The only thing I am watching at this point is what the BTC pair is doing.
